Alameda County will be awarded $2,160,000. Alameda County created the Lead Poisoning Prevention Program (ACLPPP) to comprehensively address childhood lead poisoning in the county. This partnership of city, county and state organizations includes the cities of Alameda, Berkley, Emeryville and Oakland, with annual local funding of approximately $2,000,000. The ACLPPP receives $715,000 annually from the State of California Department of Health Services, under the authority of the Health Officer of Alameda County, to provide medical case management services to lead poisoned children countywide. The ACLPPP has a long history of success, which can be attributed to its effective collaboration with local housing departments, non-profit housing developers, health agencies, and community organizations.

In this successful Round 10 Partnerships for Affordable Lead-Safe Housing proposal, the lead program seeks to work closely with local Housing Authorities to maintain and expand lead-safe Section 8 Housing Choice Voucher Program rental units. The grant's goal is to remediate 167 units of housing for very low, and low-income residents and to increase lead awareness among Section 8 property owners and low-income tenants. Training will be provided to contractors, property owners, and workers with lead-safe practices and lead certification requirements.

Local housing authorities, county organizations, faith-based and non-profit organizations, and private property owners will provide a total of $1,770,364 in matching funds.
